Real Nappies

How to save money with reusable nappies

cut along dotted line

Real nappies are nappies that can be washed and used again and again. Many parents are switching to real nappies because they believe that they are the best choice. Here are some of the reasons why:

- As the family grows, so do the savings: the nappies you used for your first child can be used for your next baby, and the next...

- Home washing costs can be as little as £2.00 per week including the price of detergents and energy
- During the typical time a baby wears nappies, parents could spend around £1200 to buy disposables. As an alternative, you may only need 12 – 24 reusable ones, depending on the type you choose.
- Far fewer raw materials are used in the manufacture of one year's supply of reusable nappies than a year's supply of disposables
- A reusable nappy can be used hundreds of times whereas a disposable is only used once and then thrown away
- Disposables can make up half the rubbish produced by a one-baby family and are a huge problem for local councils.

- Real nappies are made from modern fabrics that wash easily and dry quickly
- Liners can be used to contain the solid waste and keep the nappy cleaner. Some types of liners can be flushed away, others can be washed for reuse
- To prevent leaks and keep baby more comfortable, most real nappies are covered with a breathable, waterproof cover and are less likely to leak than disposables
- They are machine washable at home in a 40°C wash. There is no need for boiling, scrubbing or even soaking, and they can be washed in with the normal wash load.
